Background/History

The Asia-Pacific Center for Security Studies (APCSS) is a Department of Defense academic institute that addresses regional and global security issues using a multilateral and multi-dimensional approach to defining and addressing regional security issues and concerns. Established in Honolulu on Sept. 4, 1995, the most beneficial result is building relationships of trust and confidence among future leaders and decision-makers within the region.

Concept

The Center has a strong focus on Executive Education via both resident and regional events. These academic events include courses, mini-courses, workshops, conferences and research. They are intertwined to produce a dynamic, integrated program of study, workshops/conferences and research to support the Center's mission.

Focus Areas

Capacity building focus areas guide curriculum development, outreach, and research. Top priority areas of focus include security issues such as: transnational security/counterterrorism; socio-economic development; energy and environmental security; security sector development; homeland security/WMD; and disaster management.

These six focus areas are embedded in an Asia-Pacific Security environment characterized by cross cutting themes: culture and religion; globalization; International Organizations/Non-Government Organizations and the private sector; governance; geopolitics and the impact of civil-military relations.

Courses

The one-week Transnational Security Cooperation: Senior Executive Course is an intensive program for current senior leaders. It is designed for military officers at the two- and three-star level and civilian equivalents from the Asia-Pacific region. The curriculum emphasizes the impact of change in the region and evolving security roles, capabilities, and opportunities.

The six-week Advanced Security Cooperation: Executive Course focuses on building relationships among mid-career leaders and decision makers within the region. Its curriculum emphasizes the non-warfighting aspects of security and international relations, and challenges Fellows to develop regional and transnational perspectives. Security is examined as a comprehensive mix of political, economic, social, military, diplomatic, information and ecological dimensions.

The four-week Comprehensive Security Responses to Terrorism Course provides focused knowledge and skills practiced at the operational and strategic level, all designed to enhance Fellow's ability to work together to counter ideological support for and combat terrorism cooperatively for the long term. The course facilitates relationships among current and future counter-terrorism practitioners. It also helps engender trust necessary for increased information sharing and identify ways to reduce cultural obstacles to cooperation in the international struggle against terrorism.

The four-week Comprehensive Crisis Management (CCM) Course: Preventing, Preparing, and Responding, formerly known as the Stability, Security, Transition and Reconstruction course, focuses on preventing, preparing and responding to crises. The course will deepen attendees' abilities to understand and deal with the multi-faceted, interdependent nature of both natural and man-made crises. The course focuses on actions to prevent routine difficulties from collapsing into crisis, responding to crises in ways that reduce the near-term impact, and setting the stage for mid-term return to a sustainable development path.

The one-week Asia-Pacific Orientation Course covers trends and current issues shaping the regional security environment. The course focuses on U.S. policy and provides an introduction to regional cultures, politics, protocols and challenges. The curriculum broadly examines: Security Foundations; Regional Security Perspectives; Country Specific Issues; Transnational Issues; Governance, and Development and Security Cooperation Issues. This rigorous program of lectures and interactive sessions better equips graduating course Fellows with policy perspectives and tools important for duties at U.S. Pacific Command and its components.

The three-day Senior Asia-Pacific Orientation Course provides an introduction to Asia-Pacific culture, politics, protocols and challenges, while addressing U.S. interests in the region. The curriculum focuses on Regional Perspectives, Issues, and Transnational Challenges. Attention is given to both historical and emerging issues. The course includes a rigorous program of lectures and interactive sessions, and three senior-leader seminar sessions.

Workshops & Conferences

Focused Outreach - APCSS staff and faculty routinely travel throughout the region to conduct mini-courses, conferences and research that address specific needs identified by host nation and U.S. Embassy officials

Conferences - APCSS' tightly focused conference program anticipates the most challenging regional and transnational security issues and cooperation tasks ahead. These serve as a forum for key regional interagency, multinational security policy drafters and decision makers to develop cooperative approaches to these problems.

Research & Info Sharing

Research - APCSS faculty members conducts collaborative research that strengthens communities of influence via partnered research on future security issues. In addition, APCSS coordinates and reports on a series of annual consultations with counterpart organizations in regional countries. Reports, papers, articles and books are available on our website at www.apcss.org.

Roundtables - More than 1,000 visitors come to APCSS each year, including senior leaders from the U.S. and other countries throughout the Asia-Pacific region. Visitors participate in roundtable discussions and serve as guest speakers.

Alumni Relations

APCSS continues to engage more than 4,500 graduates as part of an Alumni Program. This program keeps alumni connected to each other and to the Center. They also have access to the APCSSLink network to share information, collaborate and research regional and global security issues.
